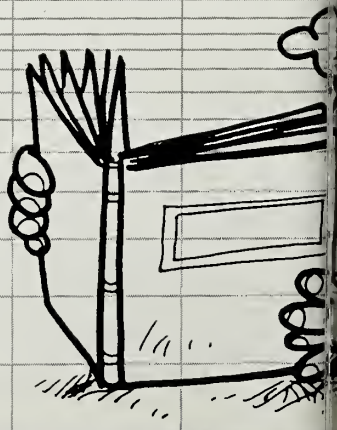
Life Dorms

Yo, Dude, we're like a pyramid! Bitchin'!

Yes, can you tell me how to order this Slim Whitman's Greatest Hits on double CD? Can I get this bonus selection of Zamfir Plays The Pan Flute, too?

Hey you guys, look! It's Barney Rubble! What an awesome actor!



In The At Coastal

My favorite part is when the tape rolls to an end and the cassette player automatically shuts itself off! Watch, there it goes!

Be all that you can be. Find your future at CCC!

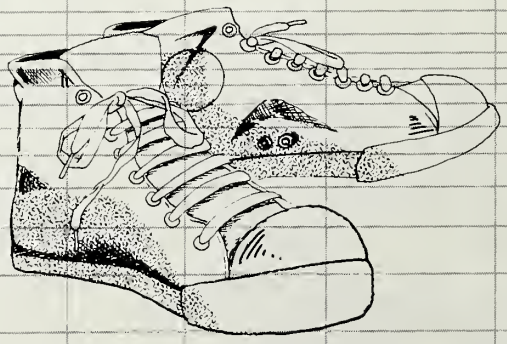
Oh, look! She's slobbering all over her pillow! Somebody get that girl a drool cup!

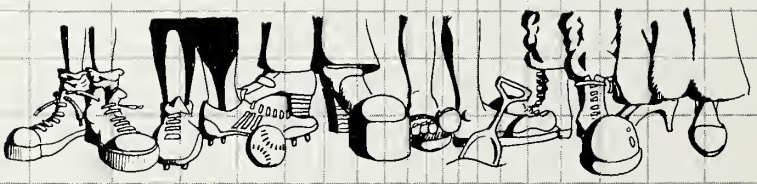
Hey dude, like welcome to the pad.

I've got to get a maid, just look at this place.

Brendan poses for a picture while maintaining his smooth nature.

The Sleeping Quarters at Coastal



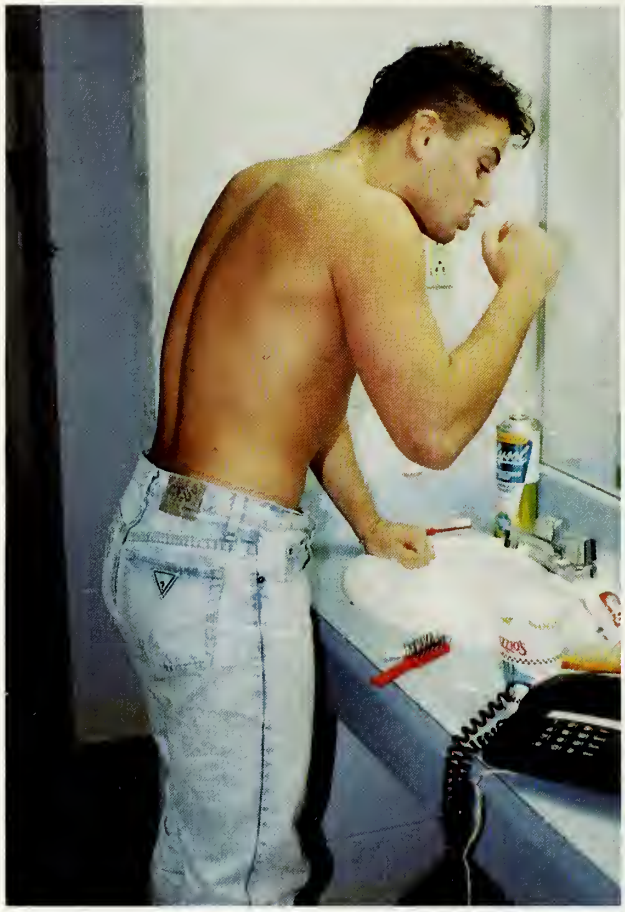


Let's Eat!!

Can it be a student from the dorms cooking and not ordering out?

You want to order from where? Frankly I don't think the Campus Station delivers to the dorms.

Too many cooks can ruin a meal, but when it's at the dorms, all help is appreciated.



Come On In

Let Us Show You What It's Like

Hey, you with the camera, can't you see I'm trying to brush my teeth.

Yo dude, like have you ever heard of this cleaning stuff called "Soft Scrub?"

Gamecock power — get ready with the BEST!!

Look dude, this guy must be a real Ms. Betty Crocker. Look how neat the room is.

Notice how clean this kitchen is; look closer; the sign on the refrigerator says, "Please Keep this kitchen clean . . . EAT OUT."

Yo dude, like where did the T.V. go?

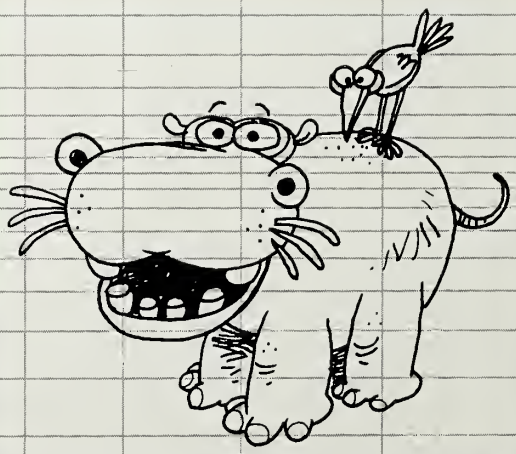
A typical students' storage area — Most students keep everything in perfect order.

Friends Are Great To Have!!!

Look at Andrew Weist and Cathy Korso. Guess where her hand is? Cathy you had better watch those hands.

Hey you with the camera, check this out.

Aren't these two cute? They sure do look innocent, but are they really?



You can always count on friends.

O.K. Everybody, Let's Have A Group Photo Taken For The Yearbook!

How would you guys like to have these girls for neighbors?

These guys are members of the famous "Roy's Fan Club."

So dude, do you want to bounce around with us for a while?

Friendship

True friendship is likened unto the mustard seeds,
Which is indeed among the least of all seeds.

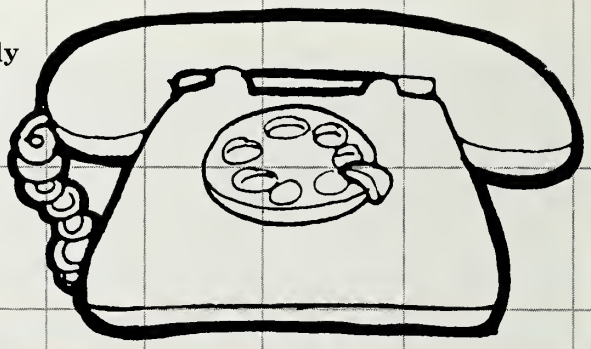
However, when friendship is sown with true love,
Nurtured by true compassion,
And watered by much understanding;
It shall grow into a thing of beauty,
And be greater than a tall tree.

The birds of happiness shall land in its branches,
And sing the song of peace.

To those who shall read
And understand what is written here,
May you go about sowing the seed of friendship,
And may God bless you richly forever.

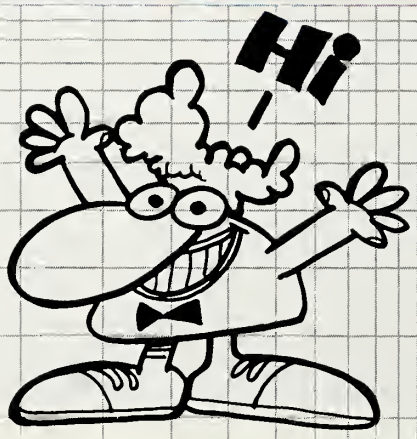
Reach Out and Touch Someone

Fox T.V. Network? I finally found Tracy Ullman — she's really annoying.



I've checked the world map and I still can't find Aynor — does it exist?

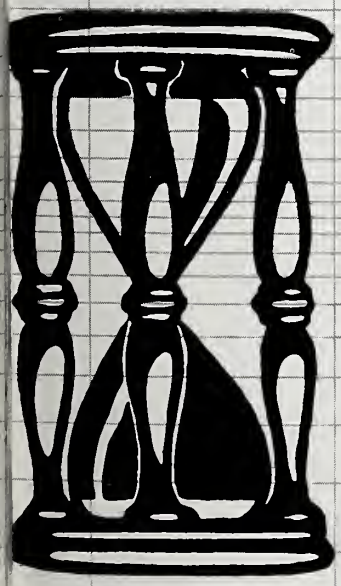
"Clark . . . Clark Gable?! I thought you died years ago. So tell me, did you really mean it when you said 'Frankly my dear, I don't give a damn!?"



Killing Time

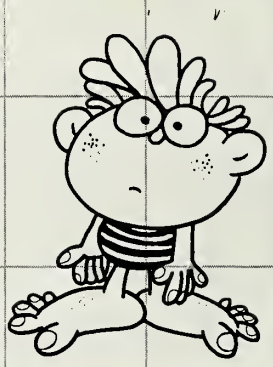
I'd like four large cheese, two pepperoni, three large pizza subs, two two liter bottles of Pepsi . . .

Hey you with the camera. Think fast.



The bare necessities of dorm life — a T.V. and a remote.

People At Coastal

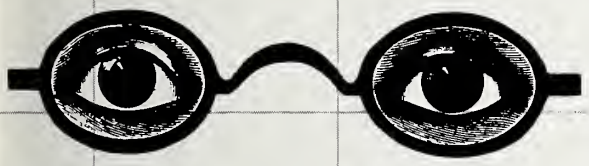


Aren't they a cute couple, taking a "love" stroll around the campus.

Hey guys, don't leave me, I just need to put on my other shoe.

Wow! What's with Julie? I think she's trying to tell us something.

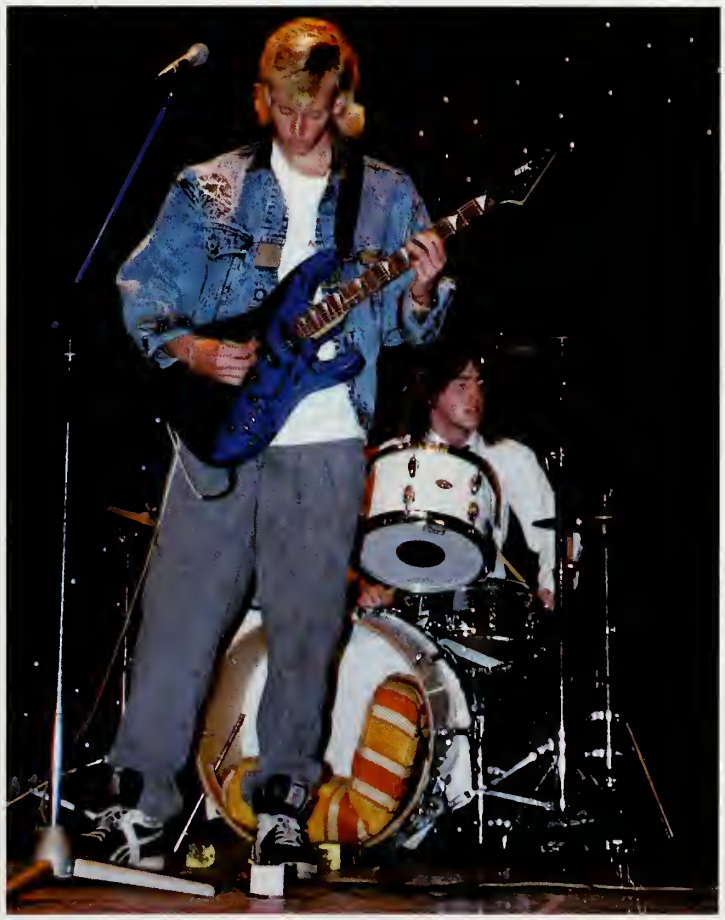
Cyndee, this isn't a stick-up.



Maybe Coastal should start a dress code?

No, drug testing hasn't been started at Coastal. I don't think we should give them any ideas either.

Talent here at Coastal is unlimited.



Jean, we have overworked you too much!

No, they are not joined at the head. Two beauties are just showing off their pearly whites.

Your place or mine, Toyota?

At Casino Day Tammy Toogood and two others show off their prizes.

Smile for the camera and say cheeseburger, please.

Radiantly glowing with happiness, she watches as some of Coastal's good looking hunks pass by.

Christmas At Coastal

Lets PARTY!!! Dr. Ron Eaglin shows his Christmas spirit.

Santa visits Coastal. He tried to find Dr. Bob Squatriglia but, he was no where to be found.

Christmas at the dorms. Brendan was a bad boy and now he has to suffer the consequences. Merry Christmas anyway.

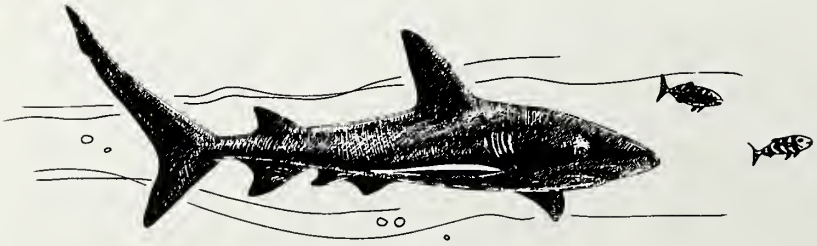
A permanently lit Santa keeps a watch over the dorm students, always checking to see who's naughty or nice.

Being all they can be, Michael and Lee work on their Marine Chemistry Lab for Dr. Libes.

Unknown sailor works on tying a knot.

Scott tries to find out what the cafeteria is putting on the food.

"I am just so happy I can just spit." Unknown student taking test.



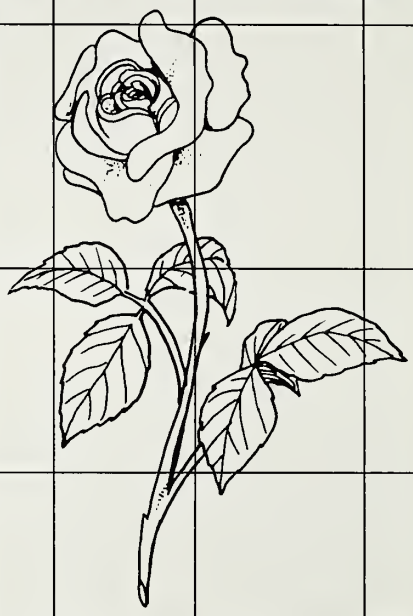
He's looking radiant this morning. Isn't he?

An abandoned girl looking for mother.

I guess admissions lowered their standards.

Take that Doctor ___?___!!!

MISS COASTAL

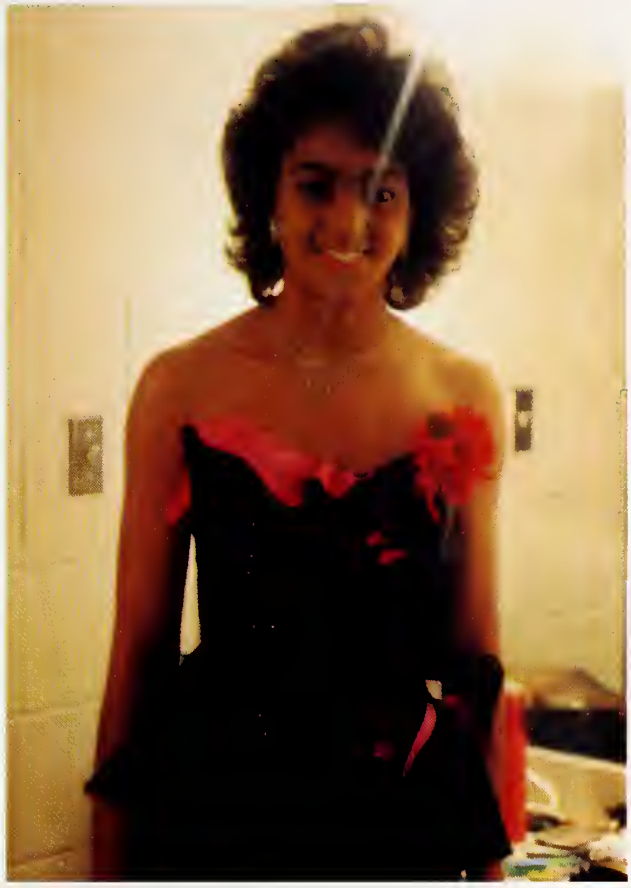


Tearfully Mindy Spires accepts the crown as the new Miss Coastal.

The other contestants gather around Mindy for a group shot.

Mindy Spires, what can be said to the S.G.A. President other than, "congratulations from all of us."

Toyota Tillman is shining like a star tonight.



Mindy and parents share in her moment of glory.

100 years ago, this area didn't even have a name. Just getting to the coast was practically impossible. But thanks to some pioneering businessmen, this beautiful beach has become one of the fastest growing resort locations in the nation. With an entrepreneurial spirit, our pioneers built the first bridge, ran the first railroad and piloted their own steamboats down the Waccamaw River. Later they diversified into the farming business growing Irish potatoes by the tons.

By 1912, the men who made up the Myrtle Beach Farms Company had incorporated and even more Myrtle Beach landmarks began to appear on the map. The Pavilion, the Seaside Inn, the Chapin Company General Store—all firsts! Soon after, golf courses appeared where cattle once grazed. Office parks, medical centers, schools, amusements, banks and a shopping mall soon followed. Today, Myrtle Beach Farms Company is one of the oldest, most highly respected real estate development firms in the southeast.

Their rich history of responsible leadership and community spirit continues to shape the character of Myrtle Beach, the Grand Strand and Horry County. Myrtle Beach Farms Company. They put Myrtle Beach on the map, and maintain a heritage as the corporate leader for the quality growth of this superlative resort community.

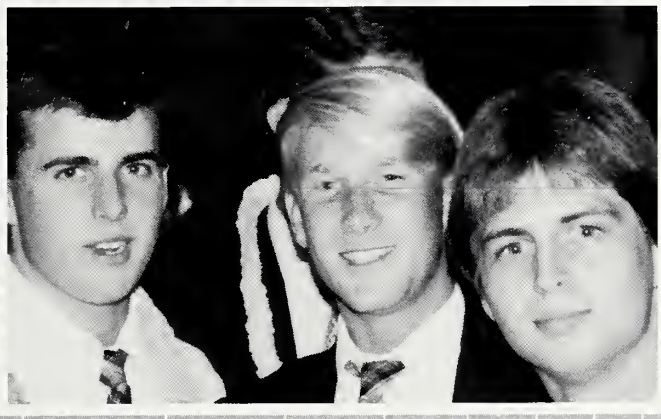
Welcome Back Dance

During the Welcome Back Dance at the Sea Mist, Jane Rowell gets the crowd going with her outstanding voice.

Pat Singleton surrounds herself with two of the most wanted guys at Coastal. GET IT PAT!



The "guys" chill for the cameraman. Careful Boys.

Who says that administration and students can't have a good time!

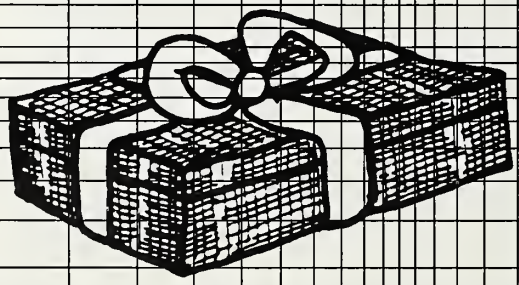
"Would you believe that this isn't a pose?"

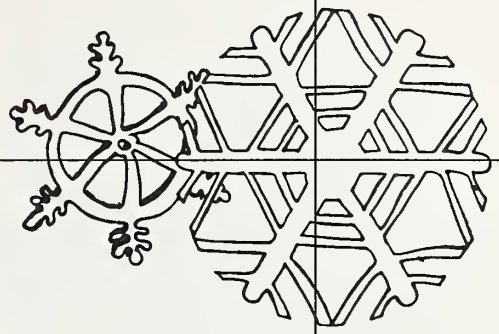
Christmas Dance

"I've checked my list once, then twice and found out you were both very nice."

Sweets for the sweet.

A good time was had by all.

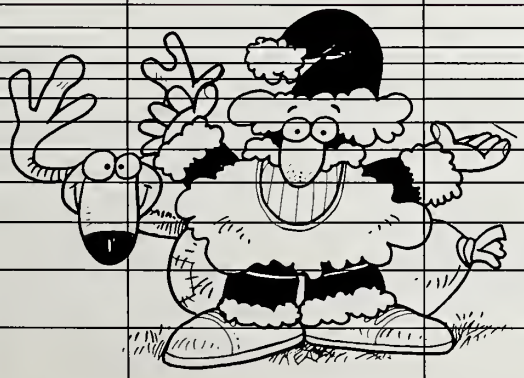




Above: Wearing the Gamecock colors, the couple looks for some mistletoe. Below: These two gentlemen received their Christmas presents early.

With all these beautiful women present at the table, his prime objective is the present.

Sick boy!

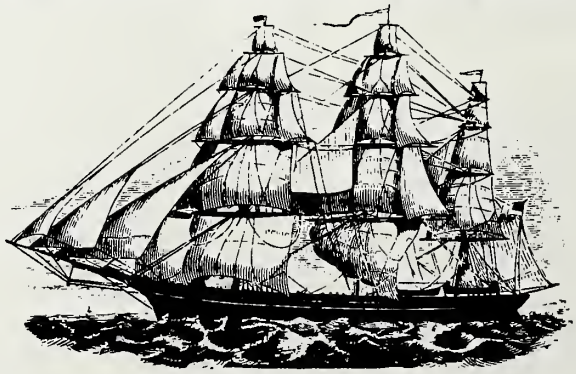


MARINE SCIENCE: DOWN AND DIRTY

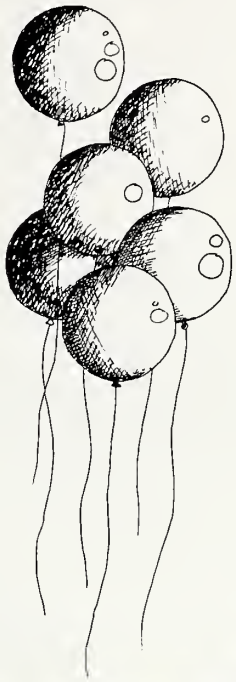
Some students lend Dr. Gayes a hand while coring.

Mike Pearson poses for G.Q.

Miss Coastal finally hits the water. She has helped the Marine Science professors in doing important research and getting research grants for the school.



Student Activity Day



Business was slow on Activities Day.

I think we can put him out on 501 for advertising.

Look mom no hair net.

Has the day gone to the birds?

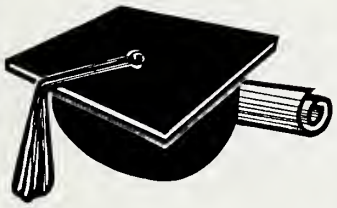
1989 Graduation

Ron Eaglin leads the final march that these seniors will take.



Ron Eaglin wishes all of you the best.

Congratulations!

Congratulations to all of you former seniors. The Atheneum as well as the school wishes you the best. If has been a long hard fight to where you are today. All of you share in satisfaction of knowing you made it! With the knowledge gained while attending Coastal nothing but the best should satisfy. Continue the good work and let nothing stand in your way.

THE DATING GAME

Left: The guys before competing for a beautiful woman. (Notice all the tension?)

The Dating Game was held at Wheelwright Auditorium on December 6, 1989. The Bachelors and Bachelorettes came out to make their love connection. Grand prize was a limousine ride and dinner for two at the Library in Myrtle Beach. Barry Richards, (The Arreazar), and Kahuna from Power 98 were the masters of ceremony.

Bottom: The winners all say good-bye to the audience.

MESSAGE FOR THE YEARBOOK FROM DR. RONALD G. EAGLIN

I hope each of you enjoys the 1989-1990 edition of our campus yearbook. The yearbook serves as a benchmark for an institution and those students who were in attendance. Students who graduate from the institution look back often to see familiar faces and to renew in their minds those experiences they had at the College. Coastal Carolina College is a dynamic institution that has changed greatly in recent years. This growth of physical facilities and growth in the student body will continue into the foreseeable future; therefore, it is important that we document our history to help us remember how the campus evolves.

My congratulations to the yearbook staff for many hours of hard work and to you the readers for supporting them. I hope this edition is appreciated and enjoyed both now and in the years to come.

Ronald G. Eaglin
Chancellor

Associate Chancellor Robert Squatriglia

Congratulations to the Atheneum staff and others involved in the successful production of this 25th Anniversary Atheneum. It is a milestone for student publications on our campus and is as much a tribute to the 1989-90 yearbook as it is to the first one, 1964-65.

Each issue of the Atheneum has built on the success of the previous year. Each is different, each is unique, each has its own character — yet each is a photographic essay of the College's history.

Nothing captures the enthusiasm of a campus — the making of friends, the making of smiles, the making of memories — as does a college yearbook. Nothing from a college's history stimulates fond memories faster, puts a twinkle into the readers' eyes quicker, or evokes faded emotions faster than does the Atheneum.

I hope that you enjoy this Atheneum as a memento of a special time for all of us. My best wishes to each of you — now, and each time you open this book in future years.

Robert W. Squatriglia
Associate Chancellor

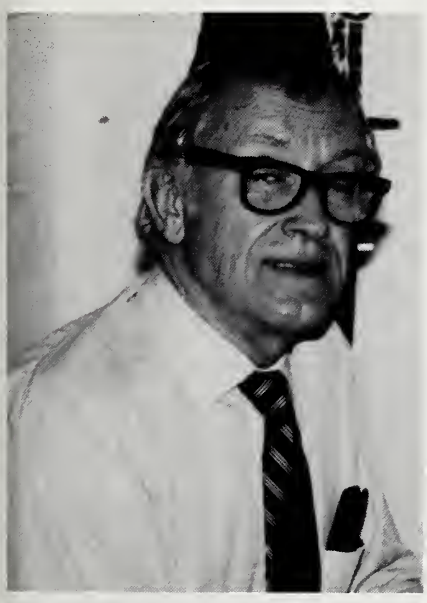
Dr. Stanton, or is it Dr. Trapper John M.D.? (must be community service).

"Coffee anyone?" Dr. Libes asks while mixing the potion for the best Mocha on campus.

That's right Dr. Gayes, Miss Coastal is sea worthy!

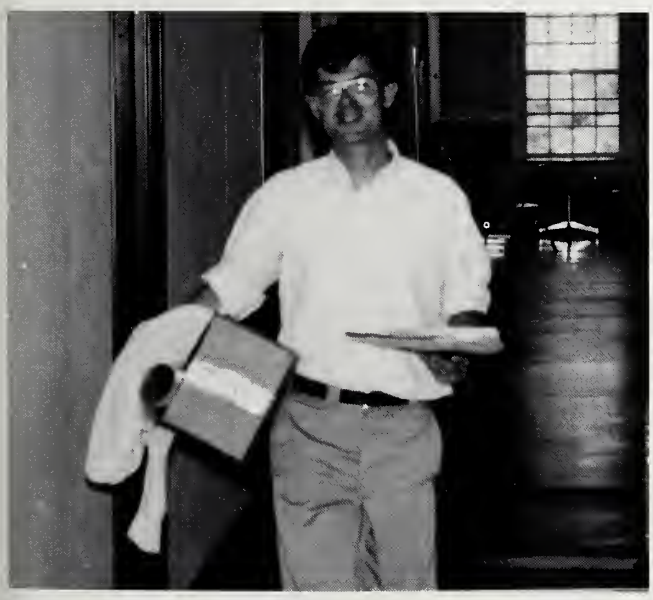
Jean Slabough, "A smile a day keeps the Atheneum Staff away" . . . Naw it doesn't.

Dr. Puskar . . . if looks could kill!!



Dr. Groves, "Here's lookin' at you kid!"

"Yo — Ms. Starbuck, Have we got a job for you!"

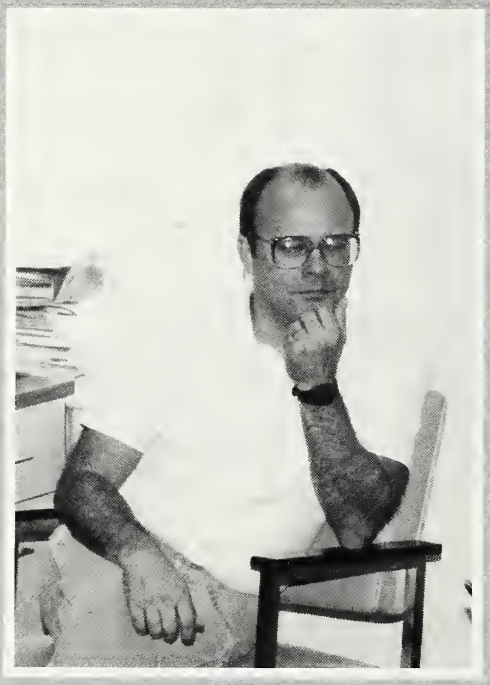


Dr. Marsh, "Caution! I saw Big Bird and boy did he look pissed!"

"Come on Pat! We told you we'd be back."

Professor Cleary goes cloudy. Time for a coffee break Claudia!

Professor Preston McKever Floyd . . . no words necessary. His sheer presence is enough.



Dr. Albiniak . . . "To Be or Not to Be?"

Dr. Freeman, Assistant Dean of Science, is only too happy to pose for the Atheneum camera.

Professor Banta is a seaman true blue, he'll make a sailor out of you!

Relax Professor Boyles! The Stock Market will open again tomorrow morning.

Dr. Historical Hicks is always there for a good party.

Dr. Paul Rice A.K.A. Dr. Do-Little, our cherished Atheneum Advisor, glares at our camera. Thanks for Everything!

Professor Shackleford of Theatre and Arts . . . "Let yourself go! Discover who you are!"

Professor Nancy Goettel, "Are you still with me?!"

Professor Fuchs, really appreciates our fine staff here at the Atheneum.

Dr. Roy Russell, "I think therefore I am."

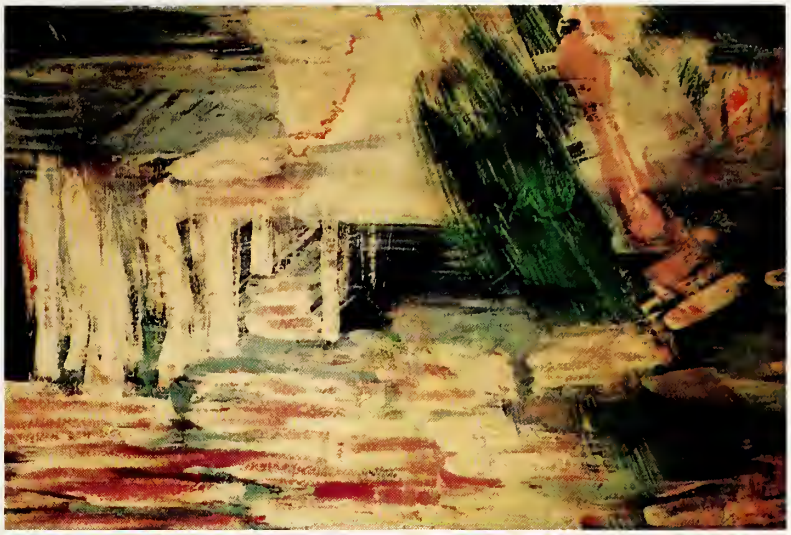
BEAUTY



A dark knight on a white horse rides across a bitter pain-swept tundra. His own grayness and the cracked, worn leather of his saddle contrasts the magnificent steed he sits astride. Close inspection, as if you could get close to him at all, reveals he spends more time taking care of the beast than himself. Hundreds of wounds from thousands of skirmishes have been left untended. He sits slope shouldered scarred body and soul — the only defect on this outstanding animal. Suddenly he jerks bolt upright, groans, and lists off to one side — the result of an untreated slash wound turned septic. His fall upsets the careful balance of sweat and blood that holds the saddle together and it falls upon his body in a great heap, spilling its supply of brushes and combs. The horse, curious at the turn of events that was befallen its benefactor, turns and lowers its head to the prone form, sniffing. Summoning his last energies, he lifts one gauntleted fist and strikes the beast a powerful blow to the side of its long head. The blow draws blood, and the blood mars the beauty and perfectness of the image. The animal starts, rears, and gallops off. His fist falls to his side, gently unclenching, and he turns and watches the swift-footed perfection run full speed away, burdened only by the saddle-blanket he paid one hundred coin for. Bought to keep its magnificent hide free of sores and blemishes. He smiles and hopes he left a scar.

Oh wonderful, clever, whirling ocean
Won't you cease that senseless motion
The stars and moon, they kiss your top
For this you will not even stop
Your sweet music, so soft and free
Your depths remain a mystery.

NIGHT BEASTS

One glass of water

and then
it's time.
Wake-up time
for your beasts.

Keep your feet under the covers,
the Crawlnbites are awake under the bed and oh-so-hungry for your little girl toes.

Lie flat on your back
so the purple Screasaurus lurking in the closet can't sneak upon you.

And when you close your cerulean eyes —
Beware!
There's no one to save you
from Grimley Fiendish.
Behind every bush
in every dream
with long sharp claws
and a long black cloak — red dragon eyes.

Caught in his winged embrace his breath will freeze you with the stench of moldy oatmeal and gasoline.

Then he sneers, flicks his pointed tongue,
curls his cracked lips and says:
"Too bad Mom forgot your night-light."

DEATH OF THE LEAVES

How complete they are, come watch their glee
See them change from green, yellow, red and gold —
This each Fall is how the leaves grow old.
They joyfully accept their destiny.
Here is a difference that's plain to me —
It's in man's own death he is not so bold,
He celebrates in black so dark, so cold.
To appreciate life, is this the Key?
Grateful to nature, this they must be
In their spirit, the wind cannot hold,
But man stand's confused by what he is told.
Man takes nature for granted, this I see.
This is the difference I do believe
Between man's death and the death of the leaves.

Kristina Williams

As I walk the path of life and all the courses that it takes
I see that I have made a great deal of mistakes . . .

Through all the ups and downs I have remained strong
I really don't know if I can remain this way for long . . .

It always seems my plight is overshadowing my gain
I don't know how much longer I can endure the bitter pain . . .

No matter what I do, no matter what I say
Nothing ever seems to ever go my way . . .

Externally it looks like I handle things so well
Internally however, it is a living hell . . .

I look back in the past to what could have been or what could now be
Those things that I wanted then are now so very distant from me . . .

I wish sometimes I could have the things I let slip away
But you don't know you lost them until the present day . . .

I have it all some people say. I really can't agree
Material items don't mean a thing when your crippled emotionally . . .

As I walk the path of life and all the courses that it takes . . .

He tries to escape, but is captured by his master
once again.
No matter how far away he runs, he is always drawn back helplessly to the fields
Even though he receives payment for his work,
a constant deduction seems to go to his owner
He seems like a puppet, his actions reflecting the influence of his master
Regaining his courage, he plans an escape and succeeds for a limited time
But just as before, seeing another person drinking draws the alcoholic back to his master, Jack Daniels himself.

Home Sweet Home

Welcome to our dim lit home.
Don't try to use our telephone.
The cable television is not broken.
We can't afford the connection token.

Please be sure to turn off the juice.
Don't waste electricity when not in use.
Power costs too much to burn.
A whole lot more than I earn.

There is no ring, ring, ring.
There is no money for such a thing.
One-hundred thirty to hear a tone.
We will never get a telephone.

"I want my MTV!"
Someone please get it for me.
Cable is a longing desire.
Maybe soon, if paychecks go higher.

Moving out was going to be fun.
Now, I realize the concept was dumb.
It really costs too much you see.
Don't be a fool, take it from me.

Stay at home as long as you can,
Unless you have a money plan.
Mother knows best you soon will realize,
Living at home will lengthen social lives.

Summer Storm

Humid green air sets in,
startled by fits of white
banging against trees:

brash white, unwary,
like a spoiled bear
nosing a garbage heap.

It must be the noise,
sudden as a metal lid
clanking to ground,

that brings on rain,
straight down,
heavy as syrup —

that whips up wind
from the south,
just beyond the sway
of right-angle pines.

In time
it must be the noise
that lumbers off
steals green, rain wind

the way the sated bear
swallows its growl
in a long, low hum.

Now Think, Joe!
by Joe Carducci

As I soared over the Shenendoah Valley of Virginia, the cool breeze swirling around my body, I had only one thought. To get this thing landed before I bled to death. My heart was pounding, a cold sweat was coming on, and my hand was throbbing. The pain in my right hand was excruciating; the dangling skin was dripping with blood.

"Now think, Joe, is there any way to set this thing down safely and quickly?" I would just have to glide her down easily, descent from the heavens as gracefully as a dove, which would take precious time.

As I was preparing myself for a slow, but steady, ride down to safety, a powerful gust of wind caught the sail, jerking the entire craft (not to mention me) higher in the sky. "This will not be quite as easy as I thought." Violently resisting the force of the wind, I shifted my weight down and into the blast of air. This prevented my climb from continued acceleration. However, it did not stop the upward advance completely.

I rode it out fairly well, and the wind eventually calmed. So I began my downward spiral, slowly jockeying myself into the proper position by the constant shifting of my body; which was a chore, considering the role hands play in those maneuvers. Surprisingly enough, all went well. With any amount of good fortune I should be preparing to make contact with the ground in a few minutes. I estimated that should take approximately five minutes.

My hand was still in agony. However, I no longer felt as desperate as before. In fact, the object of concern had almost stopped bleeding. I decided not to think about this hunk of dripping-red flesh until I was in a position to take care of it: safe on the ground.

Suddenly, a million different thoughts came to me. My mind began to race, dancing rapidly and wildly. I was seeing flashes of places I remember from trips and weekend excursions: the MGM Grand casino in Las Vegas, the Grand Canyon, the lights of downtown San Antonio, the Sears Tower in Chicago, and the loop roads of Washington and New York City during rush hour. These images soared, moved, and were almost alive. They changed repeatedly, going from one to another. It was as if I had lost control over my mind, my sanity.

Just as suddenly as these scenes appeared, they vanished. Then I realized that I was about to set down on level ground. I had no recollection of the battle to lose the final fifty feet of altitude — all the shifting, twisting, and turning, strenuously working rarely-used muscles to force myself and the skycraft lower and lower — until my feet touched the sacred earth.

ALL THAT GLITTERS IS RED AND BLACK

Late at night or early in the morning, time is of no importance when it comes to cheerleading practice. Besides running 3 miles, swimming 50 lengths and lifting weights twice a week, outside of practice, they average six to eight hours of practice a week. Under the new leadership of Coach Kim Grant, this team is one of the best Coastal has had yet. They are very optimistic about competing in cheerleading competitions in the near future.

Not only did they support the basketball team, but you could find them at other sports events as well. It was clear to see they were full of spirit and pride in our school.

The Lady Chants finished the 1988-1989 season with a 14-14 record, Coastal's first .500 season since joining the ranks of NCAA Division 1 in 1986.

This season seems to be more promising with the return of Sophomore forward Holly Bottar and Junior Rhonda Grant who both earned all conference honors. Grant led the Big South in rebounding last year, while Bottar dazzled all with her outside shooting. Head coach Gina Markland was named Big South coach of the year in 1989.

BASEBALL

BASEBALL TEAM EYING NCAA BID IN 1990

by Pat Mashburn, Asst. Sports Information Director

The news had just come across the wire and Coastal Carolina head baseball coach John Vrooman was elated. It's not that he needed any more incentive going into the 1990 season after having won the Big South Conference Championship in 1989, but the fact that the Big South Conference received an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament was a definite boost.

Vrooman, the chairman of the Big South Baseball committee, knew it was coming, but did not expect it this year.

As the team prepares for the 1990 season, last year's record of 33-15 is cause for optimism. For example, Coastal Carolina, one of the smaller Division I teams in the nation, could have played a soft schedule and won 40 or 50 games, but played against the big boys and held their ground in addition to carving out a 15-3 record against big South Conference opponents.

From the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Chanticleers played North Carolina, North Carolina State, and Clemson for a total of eight games. Coastal was 4-4 versus the ACC. On March 1, when they defeated North Carolina 14-10, the Tarheels were nationally ranked. The situation was the same on March 17 when Coastal upended N.C. State, 8-1.

Against in-state rival South Carolina, the Chants were 1-1, winning the first meeting, 5-2 on March 29, 1989 and falling in the second contest, 10-3.

Now you get an idea of the enthusiasm running high about the team in 1990.

To prepare for the Big South Conference Tournament and a possible NCAA Tournament bid, Coach Vrooman has put together yet another tough schedule that should have the team prepared for tournament time.

In addition to nationally ranked North Carolina, North Carolina State, and Georgia Tech, Coastal entertains other ACC powers Maryland, and Clemson. Coastal opens up the season with a weekend series in Atlanta, Ga. against the Yellow Jackets Feb. 9-11.

Also on the schedule is one game against in-state rival South Carolina which will be at Coastal on April 25.

Coastal closes out the season with a three-game series at home against Central Florida on May 5-7.

The Big South Conference Tournament, which will be double elimination, will be held at Coastal Carolina May 12-15.

The winner gets an invitation to the big dance, the NCAA Tournament and will earn the distinction of becoming the first Big South Conference sport to qualify for an NCAA bid for post-season play.

Uninvited "Preacher Man" Visits Coastal Carolina

By: William McGuire

Preacher Man looks at his wife with question and asks "What have we gotten ourselves into?"

Preacher Man tries to quote something from the Bible and fails but swears that its in there somewhere.

During this fall semester of 1989, a man of irrational and immoderate beliefs walked onto the campus of Coastal Carolina College. He carried a Bible and shouldered a seven-foot, wooden cross. The cross was painted as a semblance of blood.

Leaning against his cross, the man began to denounce students in a sanctimonious and accusatory tone. At one point he even declared that the students would all go to hell, because they were attending college, a corrupt and immoral institution by nature.

As one might expect, the students quickly rose to their own defense stating their reasons for attending college and pursuing certain goals. Of course, a rational and intelligent argument was not possible with the fellow bearing the cross. It is impossible to reason with someone who substitutes faith for logic and emotion for reason, and it always will be.

What is important is not whether or not the students were able to convince the "preacher" that their ideas and beliefs were good or right, but that they knew exactly what those ideas and beliefs were. All too often we are allowed to slide along in this world without being challenged as to who we are and what we believe in, and that is a shame.

The world may not shout, "You are wrong," as loud and direct as the visiting "preacher," but it is always asking "Who are you?"

For our own benefit, let's all perk up our ears and find the answer. Just remember, the world can't hear your response, it will only be able to see it.

Preacher Man tells Coastal students that they are all going to hell for getting an education.

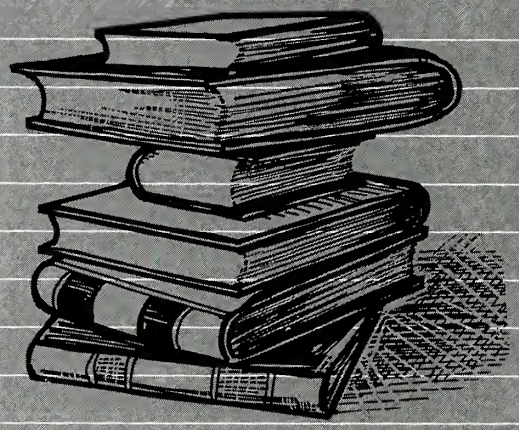
MICKEY SPILLANE



Mickey Spillane's fictional character Mike Hammer is a tough straight shooting detective who is never at a loss for words around women. Mike Hammer comes from the old school of detectives. Mickey comes from the same piece of terry cloth. He is attentive, warm, and above all things extremely at ease. The tough image persona of Mike Hammer slips into a story telling person who enjoys telling a story over the inherent notoriety.

Hugo roared in here like a nasty pit bull, tore up what he could and spit the pieces all over the place. Being on the edge of the creek he got in early bites at me, clawed his way from the water up through the area, got a second wind and took on the rest of Horry County.

What he left behind was recognizable, but barely. My area was strewn with foreign copies of my books and probing tourists think this must be spy heaven. Matchbook sized individual ashtray and pencils with the famous LITE logo of TV fame go from creekside to Highway 17.

So did my new book. At least three quarters of it. I found two chapters, but Hurricane Hugo, led by a 135 mph blast took everything out in that mad charge. Today, everything is upstairs. Downstairs is one big hole where insurance adjustors try to pick the rest of the rubble apart.

But we're still here. The three cats survived. There are some horned toads under the neighbor's house and where they came from baffles me. However, by this time next year we should be back to normal. I hope.

I still think Hugo was a Yankee dog.

The Ocean

Like dark rolling mountains
That crumble at his command
The fury of the waters
The sinking of the sand
The danger this encounters
To fishermen in distress
The swimmers fear, the childrens cheer
It's beautiful mone the less

It's also very tranquil.
To many a troubled soul
The refreshing of the cool salt air,
To make the baby whale.
The sound of the waves against the shore
Is something to make you rest.
This ocean god created
Is nothing but the best.

"THE HOUSE WHERE A SOLDIER USED TO LIVE"

Kids are breaking windows in an old abandoned house; shattered glass falls on a moldy old carpet, and a moth-eaten copy of the Times.

Outside, where children once played at war in the yard, now only the weeds grow up, to stand a lonely guard.

The floorboards creak and groan by day, with the cellar full of rats, a Bluebird nesting in the chimney, and the gables full of bats.

And a dusty medal box sits on a shelf in the downstairs closet; a last hurrah for a fine young man who never came back from the war . . .

Welcome To The New Century.

The urge to climb behind the wheel of an exhilarating automobile and drive the open roads of our land is a national trait. And ever since 1903, automobiles proudly wearing the Buick name have played a major part in that tradition.

Buicks have changed since 1903; but the more they change, the more they remain Buicks.

Buick owners tend to be as special as the automobiles proudly wearing the Buick name - men and women with a respect for tradition and a deep appreciation of the one quality that is indispensable in a fine car: quality itself.

The Day Everything Changed.

The horse was more than sleek flanks, flaring nostrils and sinewy beauty. It represented a way of life. It was the status quo.

Ah, but the car. It was simply a machine trying to shoulder its way into a lifestyle that was still not completely at ease with machines.

There had to be a confrontation.

The machine had to be put in its place.

And so in some unremembered pasture, on some unremembered day, that people lined up to watch some unremembered horse defend their way of life.

What they saw was history.

It didn't matter that the car had won.

The mere fact that it was there was a victory.

The automobile had arrived. And the technology and tempo of an entire country-indeed, the entire world-had changed forever.

"Last year I was out of work. This year I have a good job in a career I wasn't even thinking about!"

At North American Institute of Aviation, you come to be the best. But you don't come to hang around. Thirteen months, not two to four years, is all the time it takes to start and finish our FAA-approved course in aviation maintenance technology.

This means we can train you, qualify you, and make you available for the aviation job market while it's still red hot—while 8,000 new openings are estimated for next year alone.

Current salaries for entry-level A&P jobs start from $8 to $14 an hour. Experienced A&P technicians now make up to $50,000 a year!*

Our accelerated A&P (airframe and powerplant) program combines intense classroom instruction with immediate hands-on training in our own dedicated hangars at our own active airport.

On-site housing and small classes also make it easier for average students to learn here and succeed. (And our location, fifteen miles from famous Myrtle Beach, makes it easier for our students to recharge their batteries on the weekends!)

Want more information? Why wait? Call or write us now.

For more information about NAIA's 13-month professional A&P training program call now, toll-free, 1-800-345-6152.

IN FOND MEMORY OF . . .

Have you ever seen a rainbow?

Have you ever seen a rainbow,
Across the great blue sky?
If you have you know that rainbows,
Don't give you time to say goodbye.

Have you ever held a butterfly,
And wanted it to stay?
And just when you are happy,
It gets up and flies away.

When someone leaves the others,
The others are left behind,
May sometimes mourn their brothers,
But sometimes they are blind.
Although we feel their passing,
We've got to understand,
That while we sit here mourning,
They're touching great gods hand.

Being Associate Editor has been a truly interesting experience. It is a very demanding job handling the yearbook finances. After Hurricane Hugo came, advertisement sales were slow. Thanks to the help of Clay, Neil and Glenn we turned it around. I don't know what I would have done without you all. I would like to thank Mike for giving me the opportunity to serve as his Associate Editor. Even though we exchanged many harsh words over the months, we are still best friends. (I still would have done things differently!!!) I would also like to thank my parents, Mr. & Mrs. Carmen Chill, for all their support, understanding and love they have given to me. You two are the greatest and I feel very lucky to have parents like you. A special thanks goes out to my grandfather, Richard Dominick, who taught me a lot about life and the real world. He inspired me to be the best I can be. I send all my love. Lastly I would like to thank my grandmother, Nancy Dominick. Even though she is no longer with us, she will always live on in my heart and mind. It has been a pleasure working with you all this year. Good luck next year.

Carmen P. Chill
Associate Editor

I would like to thank all that have helped with The 1989-1990 Atheneum. This has been a very hard year for all of us due to the limited number of staff members. Next year I hope there is more participation in order to produce an even better yearbook. As one may see, the yearbook is improving year by year and I hope the tradition carries on.

Clay Fearrington
Head Photographer

What a Year! Thanks, Mike for letting me in the door, to this day I swear I thought those trees were a driveway! It's been great working with you. I hope you get rich from doing this. Thank You, Mark for supporting and loving me. You're the best. Thanks to my roommates Marie, Gina, and Ginger for showing me how to relax after a deadline. Ha! To the rest of the Atheneum staff, see ya'll next year.

Suzi Epling
Layout Editor

I have only been on the staff a short while and have to say it has been an experience (especially knowing Mike and Carmen)! I know next year will be just as fun as this one. I would like to thank Stephanie and Shawn for being there for me when I needed them! Also, the DINNER was GREAT!!!

Crystal Benfield
Atheneum Homecoming Representative
Moral Support and Music Selection Advisor.

Thank you for letting me "Help" do layouts. Next year I promise not to chew up so many pens, or to doody all over the black chair (Next year it will be the blue one).

Paco Bird

This year has definitely been a bizarre one. With Hugo, the Killer Snow, Parking, and the Dorm Incident, it is amazing that anybody got much accomplished. I really enjoyed doing what I could for this years annual. Here's hoping for one outrageous summer and an incredible Senior year!

Joey Froelich

The Atheneum is back and better than ever. It took a joint effort to deliver this fine yearbook on time. Now there is but one page to be finished and the very creativeness that has helped produce this yearbook has all but stopped flowing. After 159 pages, one would tend to believe that one more would be easy. Ha! Right now I am struggling for words. The job of creating this yearbook from nothing but empty pages seemed at the time to be such a monumental challenge. Now as I type, the end is in sight both verbally as well as physically. I am so proud of my staff, for without them none of this could have been done. They took every challenge in stride. Hugo was no exception. I'd like to thank my parents, Pat Singleton-Young, Carmen, and Clay for putting up with me all this time. I know it hasn't been easy. I hope that the following yearbooks will continue to improve, but to do so the student body needs to have more input. The yearbook is a reflection of the school, and the students make up the school. So please join the yearbook and help it become more like you.
